If a student owns a book, and it is a "complimentary copy" and then chooses to sell it to either their bookstore, or to a book buyer who recycles the textbook, then it may end up being sold at a store that sells textbooks. If they sell instructor edition textbooks, it is usually the case that the content of those books is not different than regular student version books, because if there are answers in the books then the store may choose not to sell those.

I was looking for cheaper textbooks. I found a really cheap book, but it is the instructor's edition. It is about 3/4 the price of the bookstore price. I really need to purchase the book at a price like this. Would it matter if I bought it for my college psychology class? Do you think the instructor would allow it or even care?

I just bought a textbook from Amazon (marketplace seller). However, the listing for the book never mentioned it was an Instructor edition. Sure enough, I pull the book from the envelope when it hits my mailbox and it has a red stripe at the top of the cover with "INSTRUCTOR'S EDITION" written within.

Ok well I bought an economics textbook from amazon, when i recieved it I removed some of the "used book" stickers and it revealed a box that said in was an instructor's sample copy and not for sale. I would like to resell it after I'm done with it. Would that be illegal? I'm thinking no because you can't tell people what to do with something that you had provided them with for free.
