A survey of the composing processes of seven working writers?columnist/ essayists Jim Fitzgerald and Kathleen Stocking, political columnists Tom Wicker and Richard Reeves, drama critic Walter Kerr, and film critics David Denby and Neal Gabler?Working at Writing offers rich and unique insights into how writing is actually done. The book has three interlocking elements: edited transcripts of interviews with the writers about their composing processes and the composition of specific works, copies of the works discussed in the transcripts, and a series of chapters that analyze the interviews and articles in the context of current research into composing. Through this unusual structure, Root investigates both the ways in which the working practices of the seven writers relate to one another and to current models of composing and the ways in which such a discussion will be of value to others, particularly to student writers and their teachers. By considering the comments of practicing writers and the examples of their compositions and by comparing the evidence of research findings with those examples of practical experience, Root gives student writers and their teachers as well the opportunity to better understand the paradigms that govern their own composing and to confirm, modify, abandon, or replace them. The final chapter discusses the implications of these professionals' experience for those who hope to become working writers. Stressing the importance of "assiduous stringsaving," immersion in context, regular composition, the rhetorical situation, and the writer's understanding of his or her own process, Root suggests both what separates the novice from the expert and how novices can apply the insights of this book as they work at their own writing.

During the 40 years that the Pistons have made their home in Detroit, the franchise has spanned the spectrum of success, from years of frustration to back-to-back NBA championships. Players from all decades are featured, including Dave DeBusschere in the '50s and '60s to Dave Bing and Bob Lanier in the '70s to Isiah Thomas and Grant Hill in the '80s and '90s.

* Continues the annual series begun in 1972 (and cited in Sheehy). A wide variety of texts are presented, for example the Episcopal Church's statement on its first woman bishop, Ayatollah Khomeini's death sentence on Salman Rushdie, various comments on the Soviet elections, San Francisco's recognition of domestic partners, the statement banning Pete Rose from baseball, and reports by Amnesty International and the Red Cross. This is all in addition to the expected government bills, laws, regulations, legal judgments, speeches, and so on. Each entry is preceded by an anonymous explanation of how the document came about and why it is historic, or will be someday. Arranged chronologically. Includes a cumulative index 1985-89.
