Irish Music is a full-colour, glossy magazine that has been in circulation since 1995. It was started by Ronan Nolan, but was taken over by Lacethorn Ltd, a Dublin-based publishing company, after a couple of years. Lacethorn also tried their hand at a magazine called Classical Ireland a year or so ago, but that seems to have now disappeared.

In Traditional Music and Irish Society: Historical Perspectives, Martin Dowling provides a historical approach, showing how what we understand as traditional music has been generated through a confluence of political, economic and social forces of Irish history over the past four-hundred-odd years. Dowling essentially illustrates that Irish traditional music is a newly constructed music, manufactured for the needs of an island going through traumatic upheaval and an emerging nation.
