This judgement attracted a lot of criticism from the media. The media accused the court of “inexorably and insidiously” bringing in a new privacy law by the back door, which is leading to greater restrictions on the freedom of the press to publish stories about the rich and powerful . It is undisputable fact that for the past five and six years the court has been applying the law in such a way it protects individual rights.

Do we need a law of privacy? Drawing a line between justified and unjustified intrusion places great stresses on our legal traditions with some judges favouring an approach which stretches existing laws to grant relief to deserving victims, whilst other judges feel that it would be more honest to simply recognize privacy as a new human right.

The right to privacy is more important than the freedom of the press. Freedom of the press is absolutely warranted on the condition that the reporting is done within the public realm. The right to privacy should be respected and reporters should be restrained from invading a person or institution's private space in order to write an article.
